Fund aim

To provide positive absolute returns in Sterling share class currency over a 3 year rolling period, utilising a variety of asset classes and regardless of market conditions. The fund will not be managed against any formal benchmark. Capital invested in the fund is at risk and there is no guarantee that the investment objective will be met over the 3 year rolling periods or in respect of any other time period. Historically, the fund has delivered lowly correlated returns to European equity markets.

Fund Commentary

"Let me repeat that $3.8 trillion of investment in renewables moved fossil fuel consumption from 82 to 81 percent, of the overall energy consumption. But you know, given the recent events and what's happened with the loss of gas and replacing it with coal, that number is likely above 82."

Jeff Currie, Goldman Sachs, Head of Global Commodities, CNBC, October 3rd

The fund returned +5% over October, compared with the IA Targeted Absolute Return sector which returned 0.5% and the Lipper Global Alternative Long/Short Equity Europe sector return of 1.2%. The correlation to the market was -0.37.

The fund made money in its long and short book. The best performing longs were product tanker shippers Torm (+27%) and Hafnia (+22%) with soft commodities giant Archer-Daniels-Midland (+17%) also performing strongly. We also made good returns from shorts in moribund online car retailer Carvana (-35%), Chinese logistic outfit Full Truck (-30%) and Tesla (-17%), despite the general bid for risk.

Measures of US inflation and labour market strength remained elevated, with core CPI hitting a new cycle high of 6.6%. Treasury yields continued to climb with the 2-year note touching 4.6% and the 10-year 4.23% (having been just 0.28% and 1.5% respectively just 12 months ago). Q3 corporate earnings season has also generally been more robust than feared, with high inflation ensuring that the booming nominal economy masks stagnating productivity and removes any imperative for corporates to shed labour, thus ensuring that wage growth remains sticky.

Nevertheless, encouraged by apparently well-placed newspaper leaks and comments from Fed Governor Daly that the Fed needed to think about "stepping down" the pace of rate hikes (like their Canadian and Australian counterparts), the "Pivoteers" (formerly the "Transitory" then "Peak inflationists") sniffed out the opportunity for an end of year rally, with equity markets rallying c. 10% from their mid-month lows, with the US dollar and Treasury yields also retracing from their highs, although Fed Fund futures are now pricing a peak rate of 5% by March 2022 (as opposed to 4.5% last month).

In Europe, German (10.4%), UK (10.1%) and EZ (10.7%) CPI hit new cycle highs. Unseasonably warm weather resulted in temporarily lower gas and electricity prices, but with little hope of filling up storage with Russian gas next year, the European energy crisis is now structural. Europe's biggest energy consumer. German chemical company BASF announced that it would relocate its manufacturing capacity away from Europe: "The challenging framework conditions in Europe endanger the international competitiveness of European producers and force us to adapt our cost structures as quickly as possible and also permanently. We cannot stick our heads in the sand and hope that this difficult situation will resolve itself on its own". Meanwhile, ECB President Christine Lagarde appeared on an Irish TV chat show saying that "inflation came from nowhere".

In the UK, Chancellor Kwarteng's sacking was inevitably followed by the resignation of Prime Minister Truss, with the new Sunak government backtracking on tax cuts, the duration of energy subsidies, and repealing the fracking ban: apparently committed to a new age of Gnome pleasing "austerity", where the Conservatives compete with Labour on which Party can signal the most moral virtue, whilst managing Britain's economic decline most effectively.

We do not believe that the costs or technical difficulties of the energy transition are appreciated and struggle to see how ostracising fossil fuels will lead to anything other than higher commodity prices, energy poverty and a multi-year bear market in everything other than the commodity related stocks which our funds currently own.
